Optical Mineralogy: Crystallography and Mineralogy for A retinoblastoma susceptibility protein variant found at high frequency in colorectal tumors results in aberrant cancer cell growth by increasing cyclin A, E2F-1, and c-myc. Variants of the retinoblastoma gene, which result in constitutively active cell cycle regulatory proteins, are associated with human cancer. Here we show that the sequence variant, Y54H, found in retinoblastoma tumors and in one patient's rectal adenocarcinoma, results in overexpression of cyclin A, a transforming protein known to 648931e174
